New Moon

December 1, 2005

9 Sagittarius 31'

We live in fear of being wrong. So strong is this fear that we are forced to assume our rightness and deny our imperfection and culpability, and thereby lose opportunities for growth. When we err we anticipate being poked, beaten, sharply criticized, punished, rejected or fired. This is primal. Much of our zeal to do right is to avoid this painful judgment. So we never concede to error. We never admit we are off course. Off course is deemed to be a horrible indictment instead of being embraced as a signal to adjust our steering. (New Moon in Sagittarius square Uranus in Pisces)

Sagittarius square Pisces says your head and heart must jive and your body is the clue to whether or not this is the case. We feel it if what we profess hasn't got a heart, doesn't have a center or an anchor. It is one thing to be right for "the world" for outer show, to fool them into thinking you are all that, but Pisces requires that we be strong inside, or things just do not have body and do not have emotional and physical well-being.

Forget about being wrong, just get to the wheel, and adjust the course of your ship so that you may head for your true star.

We need to balance striving (Sagittarius) with being (Pisces). Life is to be enjoyed, investigated, and explored. Yet while we look for more and work for more and better (Sagittarius), we must have a certain contentment that all is well and we are all right. (Pisces). Be all that you can be. Search for the solutions and the answers. Try something different. Take a chance. Take a dare. Challenge yourself to get out of your comfort zone and to vote your own conscience in your actions and aspirations.

Femininity is taking responsibility for who I am--not what I do, no how I seem to be, not what I accomplish. When all the doing is done and I have to face myself in my naked reality, who am I? What are my values? What are my needs? Am I true to myself or do I betray myself? What are my feelings? Am I capable of love? Am I true to my love? --
